

saved from the rubble

BY ELODIA PERAL

Bullets, bombs, fear, scandal, deaths, soldiers, tragedies ... Can you imagine your childhood being ruined due to war? This is the case of thousands of children living in a country at war. Thousands of people lose their lives because of wars, and children, the most innocent ones, are not an exception.

This photo is taken from a video, where we can see a little boy named Omran Daqneesh, where you can see how the child is surrounded by rubble. In the background we can see many people that probably are looking for people lost in the rubble, everything is dark and the buildings are in debris. The little boy must have been taken to an ambulance, where he will probably have medical attention later. We can see the child full of dust and blood sitting on a chair. In the background we can see drawers that will probably be full of medicines and things to care for the injured. The child will probably not know where his family is. He must be terrified and in pain. In his eyes you can see the sadness. In the video we can see how the little boy does not cry, but he is probably torn and full of sadness.

I believe that many people lose happiness due to wars, and if we all come together, we could help the poorest countries that are in the worst conditions so that all this stops happening, and they stop losing lives due to war and destruction.
